Intentional AI in Treasury: What to Build, What to Buy, and What to Leave Alone

An interactive look at where treasury management systems stand today — what's genuinely changed and what hasn't. You'll walk away knowing which TMS capabilities are mature enough to standardize on, how to decide whether a workload belongs in the ERP or the TMS, and which AI use cases are production-ready versus still dependent on data readiness. Live polls throughout capture how the room compares on capability gaps, upgrade timing, integration approach, and AI adoption.

Session leader:

Some of the most valuable insights emerge between sessions. This break is an opportunity to connect one-on-one with fellow members, dive deeper into topics discussed in the meeting, share experiences, and build relationships that continue long after the meeting concludes.

11:15 – 12:00pm

Projects & Priorities

Members will take a few minutes each to tell us what projects they are working on over the next six to twelve months. We will highlight the most pressing priorities, see if anyone else in the room is dealing with the same challenges and whether anyone has dealt with these challenges before. We will look for opportunities to connect in small groups after the meeting to focus on problem/solution discussions and will share the output with the larger group.

12:00 – 12:45pm

Lunch and Networking

Enjoy lunch with fellow members while continuing the conversations sparked during the meeting. This informal setting provides an opportunity to exchange ideas, strengthen relationships, and connect with peers facing similar opportunities and challenges.

Global Dollars, Local Execution: Connecting Treasury, HQ, and Banking Partners

This session examines Deutsche Bank's global dollar initiative, which centralizes USD liquidity in the US, and compares the structuring options available, along with the trade-offs each carries. Several scenarios will be presented for group discussion, giving attendees practical frameworks and talking points to bring back to their own HQ when making the case for USD centralization.

Session leader:

Who Gets a Seat at the Table? Decision Making Between Regional Treasury & HQ

This interactive panel looks at how decisions actually get made between regional/subsidiary treasury and HQ — bank RFPs, TMS or fintech/AI selection, and the build-out of regional treasury centers or shared service centers. With live polling and open dialogue, the wider audience will be integral to driving the discussion alongside the panel. This session bookends the day's opening message on how regional treasury builds visibility and influence at HQ.
